This provision was inserted so that in case another export house should sell to a Brazilian buyer (the Praxis Company reserve the right to fill orders from other commission houses) and should charge a commission on the sale, that price would be the same as the price granted by the International Export House. The salesman is on a salary, with a bonus, provided his sales total reaches a certain mark during any fiscal half-year. In view of the final paragraph of the letter, it should be mentioned that the contract provides that the Praxis Company shall supply all advertising matter requested by the salesman, within reasonable limits, and shall pay transportation charges on it to the export house, the latter bearing all further expense. If a manufacturer's products enjoy any considerable popularity abroad, many orders will reach him through the Inquiries from Export commission houses and much Lommsston Houses, . . . of his correspondence will be with the buyers of these, for instance: New York City, January 7, 191--.
