Forgotten Books, 2018. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Chaplain, Vol. 19: December, 1962 Religious Education. Chapel construction and other supporting costs, compared to salaries for chaplains, would be in the ratio of, perhaps, four to one. Any proposal to reduce the size and scope of these ministries to the Armed Forces would be a poor reflection of concern for the religious and moral welfare of the personnel, and would be done in the face of vast and increasing amounts spent for weapons. Even if some church leaders felt such a scaling-down were desirable, so that the churches might be able to assume the whole burden themselves, it is not likely that such a decision would be, politically feasible. Nor would there be unanimity among the churches, since not all hold the same view regarding the inter-relation of church and state at such points as this. It is often erroneously held that only the government contributes to the chaplaincy. Today it is a shared responsibility between church and state. The churches, as a part of their ministry to service personnel, bear the cost of training and recruiting chaplain candidates. Chaplains are no longer recruited directly by the Armed Forces. The denominations provide candidates against a requested quota from each service. There is no obligation to fill this quota. No man serves without the endorsement of his denomination, and that endorsement may be withdrawn, in effect, terminating the chaplain's eligibility to serve. It is at great loss to the denominational work of the churches that they send so many well-qualified ministers to this cooperative effort. Many feel that it is very appropriate that the government share in this loss to the full extent of the support now given....
