The one standing upon the top podium for the Olympic 1500 meters did not get there by a casual approach to his sport. The ultimate prize was attained by a combination of a passion for his sport and a work ethic paralleled by few. The person that receives the gift of God s salvation will be just like the athlete. The Apostle Paul said that the athlete works for a physical crown yet the saints for an imperishable crown (see 1 Corinthians 9:23-27). David, the man after God s own heart, displays a passion and work ethic for God s gifts that is found only in a few (Matthew 7:13-14). A young David finds the answer to an age old question that few will even consider. If it be that God demands man s moral perfection then how can I attain it? The pessimist views moral perfection as impossible. Jesus tells us; however, that all things are possible with God (see Matthew 19:26). God s grace is the bridge that connects sinful man to the divine expectations of moral perfection. Psalms 119 tells the story of one s passion and great effort to attain God s high expectation of moral perfection. This study is intended to serve as motivation to open the Bible and read it. The more we read the greater our understanding and strength.
