Holding Up a Mirror: How Civilizations Decline (Paperback)

By Anne Glyn-Jones

IMPRINT ACADEMIC, United Kingdom, 2000. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. The good news is: that faith in material goods really does bring prosperity to society. The bad news is: that self-same commitment to material things leads inexorably to the destruction of the civilizations it builds. Using theatre as a measure society's health, this book shows that Ancient Greece and Rome, Mediaeval Christendom and our own contemporary society all follow the same pattern: prosperity thrives on the conviction that the material world alone constitutes true reality; but that very conviction leads to a rejection of the supernatural, undermines absolute moral standards, and leads to cultural and social disintegration.
