Excerpt from The Latter-Day Saints Millennial Star, Vol. 70: March 26, 1908 What would have been the result had the young man hearkened to the advice of the Son of God? Among the poor who would have been made recipients of his charity his name would have been held in honorable remembrance. He would at the same time have saved his own soul, compared with which the riches of this world are as dross. In all probability he would have become a bright and shining light in the Church of Christ, a preacher of righteousness, a savior of souls. And at the last he would have come into possession of the riches of eternity - eternal life and an exaltation in the celestial kingdom of God. All these honors he forfeited in order that he might enjoy for a season the luxuries, the ease and comfort and the worldly distinction that were enjoyed by those who were possessed of wealth. Let us now turn our attention to another class of men, to men who forsook everything for the kingdom of heaven s sake. When the rich young man had departed sorrowfully to his home, one of Christ s disciples turned to Him and said, Behold we have for saken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefor? This question appears, at first sight, to have a ring of self-interest about it, as though the apostles were desirouspf making a good bargain. Christ, however, did not view it in that light. Had He, He would have promptly rebuked Peter instead of satisfying his curiosity. Besides, the Lord had made many promises to those who would do His will, come out of the world...
