Chipmunkpublishing, United Kingdom, 2009. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .About the Author Andrew was born in 1951 and has always lived in the South-East of England. His ethnicity is White British. Andrew took a degree in Politics at Reading University but failed his finals in 1974. In 1985 he was awarded a pass BA in Social Science by the Open University. In 1993 he was awarded an honours BA in Politics by the OU and in 1998 was awarded an MA in Social and Public Policy by Brighton University. The author was first admitted to a psychiatric institution in 1974 and was subsequently diagnosed with schizophrenia. He was a revolving door patient with frequent admissions and discharges from Hellingly in Sussex and Oakwood in Kent, both NHS institutions. Andrew feels he was saved by the introduction of community care and the closure of the asylums, which never got it right. Although he has never had a work career, has only briefly been a home owner, and has never been a higher rate tax payer, and can hardly therefore be described as a Thatcherite, Andrew fully acknowledges that it was Mrs Thatcher s government which closed the asylums and gave him a life of some hope. The last episode of five years untreated psychosis, which is the subject of The Durham Light and other stories , was logged by Andrew in several short stories which combine to make this publication. This was completed in about 1998. Following some difficulties, this booklet was produced in digital format for publication in 2008. A point about the description of the delusions that Andrew suffered is that there was virtually no visual or auditory hallucination. As will become apparent, Andrew lived in a world of half fact,...
