From briny waves, their sires domain, Their native streams cannot detain--Cheerily the striplings journey forth, The heirs apparent and lords of both; But grieve not, angler, to loose such store, They 11 never cease to bring thee moie. Drakes, in their swadlings, tempt the trout by day, And in the evenings in new dresses play. Browns, beetles, spinners, during day come on--Duns, moths, and th Empress, after day is done. Tribes of busy bouse flies, -and nameless numbers bound Bank in the woods--the grass--the air--the ground; And numbers, unconscious, on treacherous waters light, Which, struggling on its surface, tempt the fish to bite. Through this gay month the Empress feeds the trout, Joined by the fairy ere the month be out. Of all the viands this rich season brings, These, the trouts choice: whence his perfection springs; Re-rich his gildings--his spotted sides expand--But dire s their havoc, when in true anglers hand. 44th. --Yellow Bbown (or Yellow Sally.)--Sizes vary. Full length, from three-eighths to half an inch or more; length, three-eights more or less. Colors altogether yellow, of paler or deeper shade, except slight touches of brown on the head, shoulders, and body; eyes, dark or black. They commence hatching with the month, and are very numerous to the end of July; are out on fine days from morning till night. They are a small smart fly; but, the Razor Grinder says they taste bitter, and fish dont like them. Hackled and legged...
