Excerpt from American Railroad Economics: A Text-Book for Investors and Students This book is the product of the authors activities as an investment analyst in New York and as an instructor in Railroad Finance at the New York University School of Commerce, Accounts and Finance. The subject, hitherto, has not been given the attention and the critical analysis commensurate with its importance. The large amount of statistical data and other information contained in the annual reports of the railroads are generally accepted without much inquiry. The work that has been done thus far by professional analysts and railroad statisticians aims to gauge railroad activities by the use of rigid standards and definite mathematical formulae. In these pages no attempt is made to lay down rules or maxims. No tables of averages are presented as final evidence of railroad status or progress. The purpose throughout is a critical examination of facts and figures derived from railroad reports and other publications with a view to assisting in the correct judgment of railroad activities and operating results.
