Excerpt from Shakespeare s Tragedy of King Richard II: Edited, With Notes and an Introduction The two dukes of Lancaster and York, to deliver the king s mind of suspicion, made answer, that they were not ignorant, how their brother of Gloucester, as a man sometime rash in words, would speak oftentimes more than he could or would bring to cfect, and the same proceeded of a faithful heart, which he bare towards the king; for that it grieved him to understand, that the confines of the English dominions should in any wise be diminished: therefore his grace ought not to regard his words, sith [since] he should take no hurt thereby. These persuasions quieted the king for a time, till he was ih formed of the practise which the duke of Gloucester had con trived (as the fame went amongst diverse persons) to imprison the king. For then the duke of Lancaster and York, first re proving the duke of Gloucester for his too liberal talking, and, perceiving that he set nothing by their words, were in doubt lest, if they should remain in the court still, he would upon a presumptuous mind, in trust to be borne out by them, attempt some outrageous enterprise. Wherefore they thought best to depart for a time into their countries, that by their absence he might the sooner learn to stay himself for doubt of further displeasure. But it came to pass, that their depart ing from the court was the casting away of the duke of Glouces ter. For after that they were gone, there ceased not such as bare him evil will, to procure the king to despatch him out of the way....
