Dr. Ewald Hering, professor of psychology at the University of Leipsic, is not a voluminous writer, but he has done considerable work in investigating the nature of specific colorsensations and the processes of life. The results of his studies have largely been accepted by his colleagues and his little essay On Memory which contains a popular exposition of this fundamental problem has become classical. Concerning its significance for physiology, Prof Michael Foster of the University of Cambridge says in the Encyclopedia Britannica, Vol. XIX, page 22: If the ingenious speculations of Hering, that specific colorsensations are due to the relation of assimilation (anabolism) to dissimulation (katabolism) of protoplasmic visual substances in the retina or in the brain, should finally pass from the condition of speculation to that of demonstrated truth, we should be brought face to face with the fact that the mere act of building up or the mere act of breaking down affects the condition of protoplasm in other ways than the one which we have hitherto considered, viz., that the building up provides energy to be set free and the breaking down lets the energy forth. In Hering s conception the mere condition of the protoplasm, whether it is largely built up or largely broken down, produces effects which result in a particular state of consciousness. Now, whatever views we may take of consciousness, we must suppose that an affection of consciousness is dependent on a change in some material. But in the case of color-sensations that material cannot be the visual substance itself, but some other substance. That is to say, according to Hering s views, the mere condition of the visual...
