Not illustrated. 1902 Excerpt: . . . now to go to the schools and begin at the ABC of the work. My twenty-five years of practice ought, in human justice, to count for something. Owing to a supposed inability to pass the state examinations, I am prohibited from going out of my state to do dental work, which I am at liberty to practice anywhere in this state. It appears to me very strange and wholly wrong that a man who is proficient enough in his profession to work in one state should not be able to work in any state. This is digressing a little, but still is a subject that is akin to the other--of providing a way whereby a practitioner of years may get his degree without so much lost time. The idea of giving honorary degrees in the same manner as do other schools is worthy of consideration. A...
