Holy Father himself on a matter of faith than she dare question the will of her parent or guardian as to whom she shall marry. The Lady Elf rida dares question both--ay, and defy both--or you may put me down to be as blind as a mole and as witless as my fathers fool. And, what is more, I have no fear concerning her, even although we shall not be able to help her. But we must help her, I cried. If we can, he made answer. You do not believe we shall be able We have Dudley and Mainwaring to deal with. Think you they have not arranged their plans And Dudley is as cunning as the devil. If one thing fails them they will have another in readiness. Of a truth, I look forward to many days imprisonment. Long enough to enable them to believe they stand in no danger from us. Then you think-- That our hope lies in the Lady Elfridas wit and will, he answered. And this was all the satisfaction I got from him, although I asked him many further questions. In truth, as I reflected afterwards, our case seemed well-nigh hopeless, although I framed many plans which at the first blush promised well. I reflected presently, however, that everything depended on what might happen at the trial on the following morning, and so I composed myself to sleep, having as I thought, prepared myself for anything that might happen....
