But she feels dreadful because she no longer wants to marry Marcus; Ornardo is all she wants. But does Ornardo, with his mind and soul full of his sister and his dead family, still love her as he did before? Lord Shusha suggests to Cici that she and Ornardo have a picnic, just as they used to. Perhaps the repetition of a past event will bring back Ornardo s affection for her. Cici jumps at the idea, and Ornardo is also enthusiastic about the picnic. For Jack, however, it is exhausting to watch. There is no doubt that Ornardo is enjoying himself re-enacting a picnic that ended mysteriously and tragically in the past but Jack feels he is just being dragged along. Ornardo throws himself into the picnic with such conviction and vigour that it is almost as...
