Flying drones, whether at events or just for fun, is a hobby many people are enjoying. Whether you re a Beginner, an Expert, or somewhere in between, there is a drone that is perfect for you. There are small quadcopters that you can fly in your living room (check with an adult first), and there are drones with all kinds of equipment like cameras. You can get quads that are very easy to learn to fly, or you can buy some that can perform flips, rolls, and even fly inverted. That s a lot of choices! Not only is flying your drone a great hobby, but it can help you stay healthy as well. You get good outdoor exercise, fresh air, and sunlight. You get to develop and practice coordination between your hands and eyes. As you become better and better, you can learn to do fancier and more difficult things with your drone. In this journal, there are two pages for each entry. They include spaces to record when you flew your drone, where you went to fly it, who went with you, what you did, and what you learned. In the front there is a do-it-yourself Table of Contents. You can create a title for each entry that you can put in your Table of Contents along with the page number so that you can quickly and easily find what you wrote about.
