Why Are You Doing It? Why Do You Do It Like That?: The Superintendent's Annual Address to the Teachers, Masters and Supervisors of the Newton Public Schools, October, 1907 To the Teachers, Masters, and Supervisors of the Newton Public Schools: We school people generally, - superintendents, masters, teachers, - waste much time in talking and hearing, in writing and reading, about professional matters. The endless stream of talk and literature which flows unceasingly from our conventions, our meetings, and our educational press, interests us and bores us, delights us and disgusts us, inspires us and discourages us, excites our approval and arouses our opposition; but it all fails to make much impression on our work. We lead dual lives. We lead a life of thought and theory, of dreams and visions, of argument and discussion, too little influenced by actual facts and conditions; and we lead a life of practice, too generally mechanical, routine practice, unenlightened and undirected by thought and ideal. Some of us find our chief delight in...
