Excerpt: . . . war, and since the Crimean war of a permanent one for 5000 men. Shorthand. The problem which inventors of systems of shorthand have attempted to solve is thus formulated by Peter Bales (c. 1547-1610), a writing-master and stenographer--to write as fast as a man speaketh treatabl. This, he says, may in appearance seem difficult; but it is in effect very easy, containing a many commodities under a few principles, the shortness whereof is attained by memory, and swiftness by practice, and sweetness by industry. Although three hundred years have elapsed since this assertion was made, ft has not yet been realised to the extent anticipated. Phonography Ls a growth of the age, and is the lineal descendant of the 200 different systems that have been published since the appearance of the first system of modern shorthand in 1588. It carries out fully the principle which...
