The method, however, which I have added, solves completely the general equations of the fifth degree, without using any auxiliary equation of a higher order, and that by a process equally as definite as the general method of solving a cubic equation complete in all its terms, though of course more laborious, the expressions for p , g , c ., in the solution, being merely assumed for greater convenience in forming the cubic by help of which four of the roots are determined, after first determining one real root, as in Dr. Rutherford s method of solving an equation of the fifth degree deprived of its second term by help of an auxiliary equation of the tenth order. Ruth. Eq., pages 20, 21. This method of solving equations of the fifth order is not likely, however. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
