Excerpt from Wisconsins Renewable Resources: A Report on Research at the University of Wisconsin Into the Renewable Resources of Field, Forest, Lake, and Stream It might be pointed out that research is a continuing effort. As far as we can see today, there will never be a time when the acquisition of new knowledge will not be a useful pursuit for man. Each new finding, each fact acquired, has its own particular practical use; it is often most useful for opening new doors for further explorations into the unknown. Mans search into the mysteries of the universe and of life will go on; it is his nature that he must explore. The advances that have resulted from this quest in the past 300 years are but a portent of the future achievements, both practical and philosophic, that are to be had. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work.
