Excerpt from Lincoln Selections: Comprising the First Lincoln-Douglas Debate, First and Second Inaugurals, Gettysburg Address In the Presidential campaign of 1856 Lincoln received 110 votes for the vice presidency on the Republican ticket, the platform of which upheld the right and duty of Congress to prohibit in the territories these twin relics of barbarism, polygamy and slavery. In the Democratic Convention of the same year the South favored the re election Of President Pierce, with Douglas as their second choice; the northern Democrats, however, favored Buchanan. Although Buchanan was nominated and later received the election, yet Douglas had shown such a following that he considered himself a prominent candidate for the place four years later. On account of his prestige in the party, when the senatorial contest came on in Illinois, in 1858, the pro-slavery Democrats naturally looked to him as his own successor, while the anti - slavery Whigs and Republicans turned as naturally to Lincoln as their choice. The great issue in the contest could be nothing else but the extension or restriction of slavery; that was the one vital topic of discussion in the North and in the South. The contest began when Lincoln made his speech at Springfield, June 17, 1858, at the close of the Republican State Convention, by which he had been named as the party candidate for Senator. This speech was answered by Douglas, July 9, in Chicago, and was followed by several other speeches by both men.
