Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Improvement Era, Vol. 12: Organ of the Seventies and the Young Mens Mutual Improvement Associations; November, 1908 I have here only made a nosegay of culled ?owers, and have brought noth ing of my own but the thread that ties them together. - montaigne. In the author s article, The Closing Years of St. Paul s Life in Rome, which appeared in the improvement era, Vol. X, Nos. 5 to 11 inclusive, an attempt was made to depict something of the life of this great Apostle of the Gentiles during his two imprison ments in Rome, and also to describe to some extent such portions of the Eternal City as must have been familiar to him during his sojourn there. It is now proposed to prosecute the theme of his residence in that city, by taking up, as far as the material to hand will permit, the subject of his Christian companions at those periods. The writer would, however, here wish to say that. In presenting the events of St. Paul s life, both in the article above alluded to as well as in the present one, he makes no claim what ever to originality. Indeed, one cannot be expected to originate history, and as in the former article so also in this one, he has confined himself to a compilation of facts and information which have been culled from such sources as he has had access to, and to this end use has been made of some of those works of studious historical writers, which have already been published to the world. The two concluding verses of the Acts of the Apostles, in the New Testament, inform us that Paul, while...
