The store owner would then have eggs, cream, and butter to sell to the people living in the community who did not farm. The system worked; everyone's needs were met and they were happy. That's not the way it is done today, though, is it? Today's farmers are either: A-large-scale producers who grow and sell commercially for a large corporation such as Del Monte(r), Tyson(r) or one of the other major players in the industry. These farmers depend on government policies and programs and the businessman's thoughts and decisions in regards to what is going to put the most money in their pockets. This leaves these farmers wearing two very big hats-the one of farmer and the one of businessman trying to meet the demands of corporate America. B-small producers (like you, most likely) who raise and produce livestock, food, and grain/hay for themselves and (hopefully) some of the people living in their own community who buy what they take to the farmer's market or directly off their farm. This does somewhat resemble the days of old, except for the fact...
