Trafford Publishing, Canada, 2009. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 224 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.This is a history of the persistent social forces and professional problems of sport and physical activity. It is intended for two different audiences: First, it should be interesting and helpful to those involved in the profession of sport and physical education and to scholars the subdisciplinary aspects of sport and physical activity education history. Second, it is offered to the general public (i.e., the trade market) because the topic is ultimately of great importance to the world. Fundamentally, the author wants to draw further attention to the conclusion of Dr. Robert G. Osterhoudt in Sport as a form of human fulfillment: An organic philosophy of sport history (Trafford, 2006): Sport as an ever-developing social force is typically not bringing about the type of human fulfillment worldwide that it could or should! In this book by Dr. Zeigler, the persistent (recurring) problems of what has become such an important life activity (i.e., sport and related physical activity) are presented and discussed individually as both the social forces and professional problems they engender. In this way people can fully comprehend the scope of each such problem throughout human history. This approach is different than in the usual longitudinal history of a subject in which the reader finds a historical narrative of some aspect of the topic chronologically with relatively little effort at interpretation (e.g., The Lou Gehrig Story). With this horizontal analytic approach, the author discusses: (1) the selected social forces (e.g., the influence of economics on sport); and (2) the selected professional concerns (e.g., the role of management on sport) in a broad socio-cultural, historical perspective. This historical technique is similar to that followed in the well-known Megatrends...
