Page Publishing, Inc., 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.The great liberal arts tradition of leadership is dead, and our twentieth-century leaders have killed it. Around the eighteenth century, the world began to revive the ancient wisdom of mankind in a period called the Enlightenment. By the late twentieth century, the truth and wisdom learned in the Enlightenment was in remission due to the fragmentation caused by new insights and complexities developed in the postmodern period. In recent years, metamodernism as a cultural era claims that thanks to technology, science, and evolution, those complexities can now be harnessed as progress reminiscent of the Enlightenment itself. We are reeducating, retooling, and re-training for new technological requirements as the path to progress for the future. By that time, however, a generational leadership shift of power will be underway between the two largest generations in American history, the baby boomers and the millennials. The new interpretation of leadership itself will be a phenomenon which has, as of yet, gone completely unexamined or, at best, has been misunderstood. History has already informed the worldview of today's youth, but soon the looming power shift will mandate a new and unique perspective. Will we be unprepared for a world under that form of leadership? Are they aware of their historical generational context? What principles can we expect from our future leaders? Metamodern Leadership outlines the seven values that identify the character of our future leaders based on the circumstances that make the Millennial Generation who they are. It is at once an attempt to implore youth to seize their potential by tying their values to ancient wisdom, as well as a warning to everyone else to understand the impacts of disregarding the inevitable tendencies of a very...
