Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Early Days of the Sun Fire Office T is probably safe to affirm that a study of the antique in any form possesses a charm for most people. There are, of course, certain exceptions. Some regard the glamour which generally surrounds the characters and events of old times as mainly an outcome of sentiment, and consequently not to be admired or encouraged. But these are comparatively few. Whilst the hurry and bustle of present day life are not conducive to the development of a spirit of research, a latent appreciation of it is often begotten by the opportunity for its indulgence, As if increase of appetite had grown By what it fed on. An unbroken link with the past of 200 years ago can hardly fail to be attractive, especially when its subject is one which belongs not exclusively to that past, but is of at least as much importance at the present time as it was then. The sun fire office happily possesses such a link, inasmuch as it has preserved the original Minute Books containing the record of its Grand Courts and General Meetings from. The date of its inception in April, 1710. A perusal of these ancient records, not always easy to decipher, furnishes a strange insight into the manners and customs of the period in the conduct of business, and it is hoped that a short account of the proceedings of the progenitors and promoters of the Company, based on their own actual writings, will not be without interest.
