III, Sec. 2, providing that the judicial power shall extend to all cases in law-and equity-arising under the Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made, under their authority; to all cases affecting ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls; to all cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction; to k: 0ntl0V6l-Slit-3S to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more-states; between a-state and citizens of another state; between citizens of different states; be tween citizens of the same state claiming land under grants of different states, and between a state, or the citizens thereof, and foreign states, citizens or subjects. While the last quoted-provision outlines the extent of the judicial power reposed lin all the courts so provided for, the extent of such power vested in the-federal distrilet court is fixed by congressional legislation as now expressed in chapter two of the Judicial Code, approved March 3, 1911, and comprises, roughly speaking, first, all civil suits at common law or in equity in which the United States is a party, and suits between citizens of the same state claiming lands under grants from different states. In the foregoing classes the jurisdiction is not conditioned on the amount in controversy. The jurisdiction also extends to suits where the matter in lcontroversy exceeds, exclusive of interest-and costs, the sum or value of three thousand dollars, and which arise under the Constitution, laws...
