It strives to serve all classes of people. In doing this it realizes the necessity of providing for the teaching of many subjects. Languages and Mathematics have been taught in the schools from the time of the first formal organizations and are well established. The sciences have been introduced into the schools within the last fifty years. They are now taught by laboratory methods and are gaining in favor and in effectiveness. The vocational subjects are persistently knocking for admission. So far, except in few places, these subjects are yet unorganized. Their form and content are still more or less problematic. Their worth as disciplinary and informational subjects is unsettled. Enough progress has been made, however, in the organization of these subjects to insure their perpetuation. The University hopes to contribute to the proper organization and development of these subjects...
