Excerpt from A Treatise on Cholera There were other individuals, even lately, who had so little respect for their own reputation as to deny that Cholera ever existed in London; and those are equally in error who believe. At present, that this disease has ceased to exist merely because the Board of Health may not think proper to publish an account of the cases; but the truth is, that in many parts of London, the cases, at this moment, are as numerous, and just as virulent, or perhaps even more so, than those that occurred at an earlier period. In the first irruption of Cholera which occurred in the prison of cold-bath Fields, the disease was confined entirely to the males. It commenced in the beginning of April, and the last case was dismissed cured on the 30th of the same month. From this period up to the end of June, there were no new cases; but on that day it broke out a second time. In this instance it commenced amongst the females, and soon spread almost all over the whole establishment, and is now at this moment much more virulent, and I am sorry to add, more fatal, than it has ever been at any former period. In the first case that occurred, the woman was attacked on the night of the 3d. and died on the 5th. Her sister, who attended her, was next taken ill, but recovered under the saline treatment.
