Not illustrated. 1917 Excerpt: . . . action of the respiratory apparatus leads to overloading and ultimate failure of the right side of the heart. Hence we must seek to keep up the respiratory pump by lessening the frequency and increasing the depth of the respirations. A great many cases will get well without treatment. This is called the self-limited condition. The disease simply runs its course, and if the patient is properly fed, strengthened, and guarded, a favorable termination may be expected. On the other hand, there are certain symptoms which demand treatment. For example, hyperpyrexia will require treatment, especially so as the continuation of the same may be the means of developing disturbances resulting in convulsions. My preference has. always been for the use of cold externally. If cyanosis exists then warm flaxseed poultices may be tried. The sudden application of cold externally causes a deep inspiration and consequent forcing of air through the alveoli, thus preventing atelectasis. The air surrounding the child should be kept moist with steam from a teakettle having a long spout directed toward the child (Fig. 134). The following case was attended by me in the babies ward of the New York Post-Graduate Hospital: --Child F. A. , 5 years old. My attention was called on August 12th to a temperature of 99Vi F. , which rose to 1047i F. , by 8. 30 the following evening. Percussion showed dullness over a complete lobe of the left lung, bronchial breathing, cough, no expectoration. The respiration rose...
