Not illustrated. 1853 Excerpt: .that this House will show that generous regard for the strength of private and personal feelings, if, however important are the other matters which have been introduced in the course of this discussion, I commence my observations by a reference to that subject of deep interest to me and to my colleagues which has just been brought under the notice of the House by my right hon. friend. For his abilities I entertain the highest respect and admiration--admiration equalled only by my respect for his private character. I confirm in every particular the statements made by my right hon friend. My right hon. friend did intimate to his colleagues at an early period, that he thought it improbable he should be enabled to co-operate with them, as a member of the Queen s government, and with the responsibilities and obligations which that situation implies, in the measures they had in contemplation with respect to education in Ireland. If my right hon. friend did not immediately press his resignation, for that I am responsible. I was unwilling to lose, until the latest moment, the advantages I derived from one I consider capable of rendering the highest and most eminent services to the country, and who was a distinguished ornament of the government. I think it right to state, or rather re-state, that it is not with regard to any question of commercial policy that my right hon. friend has sent in his resignation. For three years 1...
