Grace Note Publications. Paperback. Condition: New. 188 pages. Dimensions: 8.0in. x 5.2in. x 0.4in. Poor auld Burtie . . . It wasnae a nice way to go, the way he went. Followed one of the trails, just beyond the lodge, to an old quarry and, on the moors just beyond, a cluster of weird outcrops formin a natral citadel remindin me o the Cullowhee Knobs, where a Cherokee Chief gave himself up to the Great Spirit. Cathy says ya can see a giant face on the quarry, but I couldnt tho maybe Im expectin the profile o that there Chief and he aint there Anyways, on the further side of the rock, halfway down, you can scramble into a cave. It looks kinda small when you first see it through a tumble of that coconut-smellin gorse and nettles: you wouldnt think it would go far, just an alcove tryin too hard to be sinister, like some corny act at a Halloween party. That pamphlet I told ya about, it said you could only pass through it if you was a virgin where would ya be without the power of legends In that summer of 63, it was great to be young and abroad, at first. The beach was dirty, the seals was lazy, but it seemed the panorama of ole Europe was there before me. Now, I guess I fear for the kids, the kids everywhere. Back then, though, it was radiant days, radiant days. A vulnerable and bullied boy vanishes from a boarding-school in an austere beautiful part of the Scottish county of Fife. A young nurse from the American South encounters love and culture-clash at the school. Her beau, a teacher and former army officer, is a tense and troubled man. A precocious young aesthete stumbles towards maturity. A...
