A warm, sunny day in May Henny and Bill two very old men, in their eighties, often mistaken for Statler and Waldorf, of Muppet fame, were sitting on a park bench in Stanley Park over-looking English Bay. It was Hennys turn to tell a story. A story completed that morning, something he had been working on since he found an old unfinished manuscript on the floor in his closet. He was anticipating telling the story to Bill, something they had been doing on a regular basis; taking a walk in the park and sitting on a bench, telling each other stories. Bill is disabled and in a wheelchair, suffering from the early onset of dementia. Henny his companion and his best friend, is experiencing bouts of forgetfulness himself. He was a teacher in his youth, but now a writer, with a few books successfully published. Both are living in the same seniors home in Vancouvers West End. Today on their walk, Henny decided to tell a ghost story, one hed been working on, sitting at his computer late into the night. In his story, an unusual set of circumstances bring six people together; two gay men Chuck Ellis, an older sixty-three year old man and his lover Max Chang. They live in Surrey, British Columbia. A hypnotist, Shawn Brady and his wife Sue, they are leaving Las Vegas, Nevada after doing a show there. Shawn meets Chuck as Chuck claims the seat between him and his wife in the first row on the plane. Two young aspiring hypnotherapists, turned entertainers, and a man named Alex Henderson a cross-dresser who when younger, over thirty years prior, became involved with Chuck Ellis....
