Excerpt: . . . flowering-pots; remove the offsets as as carefully as possible, and preserve the roots of the old plants from injury, as much as you can. The surface of the balls may be rubbed off a little, so that the fibres are not bruised or broken, and the loose crocks at the bottom may be taken away; but the next sized pot must be supplied with crocks, and sufficient compost in them to raise the ball to the surface. Compost must then be filled in between the ball and the pot, and pressed between, without moving or displacing the root. If, on turning out any of these balls, the roots do not appear to have grown much round the sides, they may be replaced in their own pot, and allowed to go over another season in the same, but if the plant be not healthy, you may conclude there is something wrong at the root, and therefore you should shake out all the soil, and examine it, as directed with regard to new plants. The plants that have been bloomed the second year, and have been one season in thirty-two sized pots, may be shaken out and deprived of some of their roots; and the best way to do this is, to shorten the main centre, or carrot-like portion, with the fibres attached to it; they must be then carefully re-potted, in the same sized pot, if strong, and if not strong, in a forty-eight sized pot;...
