Going to College: How Social, Economic, and Educational Factors Influence the Decisions Students Make

By Don Hossler

Johns Hopkins University Press. Paperback. Condition: New. 192 pages. Dimensions: 8.8in. x 6.2in. x 0.7in. Going to College tells the powerful story of how high school students make choices about postsecondary education. Drawing on their unprecedented nine-year study of high school students, the authors explore how students and their parents negotiate these important decisions. Family background, finances, education, information all influence students plans after high school and the career paths they pursue, as do the more subtle messages delivered by parents and counselors which shape adolescents self-expectations. For high school guidance counselors, college admissions counselors, parents and teachers, and public policy makers, this book is a valuable resource that explains the decision-making process and helps adults to help students make appropriate choices. The authors identify predisposition, search, and choice as the three stages in the student decision-making process. Predisposition refers to the plans students develop for education or work after they graduate from high school. The search stage involves students discovering and evaluating a variety of colleges and universities. In the choice stage, students choose a school to attend from among a list of institutions that are being seriously considered. Understanding exactly how students move through the predisposition, search, and choice stages...
