(These appear to be portions of adherent omentum which have been changed into congeries of dilated veins.) The shape of the placenta is peculiar; the bulk of it is circular, with an excentric cord inserted near one border (the right). Beyond this and separated from it by a deep sulcus is a crescentic mass of placental tissue attached to the main placenta by its horns and lower surface. On the surface of this crescentic part is a pale red, fringed mucous patch, which appears to be the fimbriated end of a Fallopian tube. No further trace of tubal structure can be made out on microscopic examination, and on section of the mass it appears to consist throughout of placental tissue. The under surface of the placenta is in many parts as smooth and free as its upper surface, but it is marked by...
