Individual samples of such preparations as elixirs, wines, emulsions, solutions, etc., would vary in minor ingredients, sometimes in strength, and frequently in color, flavor and general appearance, according to the choice of the maker. Oftentimes the differences in any particular preparation were of little or no importance therapeutically, but were manifested in physical properties sufficiently to cause confusion among physicians and patients, and to require that the pharmacist carry in stock several different brands of the article in order to supply the demands of his trade. Thus both ethical and economic conditions in pharmacy called for a standard formulary of recognized authority which would eliminate non-essential differences and would supply uniform preparations, not included in...
