RICHARD GRANT is a man determined to make something of himself. He thinks he almost has it all; a job as an engineer in Egypt (under British control), a wealthy fiancée (ELISABETH), and a rich collection of antiques. It is when he attempts to acquire yet another item, a bronze statuette of the Egyptian Goddess Bastet that his life changes forever. He is about to embark on series of experiences that would challenge every idea, dream, and preconceived notion about life and happiness. At the end of the 19th century, there is little that could be refused to an Englishman in Egypt; yet RICHARD wants more. He aspires to a great future despite his humble birth. In the armed struggle he shoots RICHARD, wounding him, and shatters the Cat of Bastet, before running away. When RICHARD examines the damage, he realizes he cannot find any pieces of his statuette but discovers a nude and bleeding woman on the floor of the room. She is soon turning into a wild animal, scratching and biting him, while...
