Excerpt from Analytic Anatomy: A Lecture Introductory to a Course Delivered in the Philadelphia Anatomical Rooms, Session of 1823-4 To bring these truths nearer to your minds, let us glance at the relations which subsist between the different parts of our body. We every where observe, that the nerves and blood-vessels are the great agents of sensation, nutrition, and life. Yet these have no independent existence; they are themselves supplied with nerves, blood-vessels and absorbents. Here, we are at once carried to the utmost limits of our comprehension, for in what an infinitely diminished series may not the nerves and blood-vessels exist, when they go to supply the vessels of vessels, and the nerves of nerves! Observe the manner in which the due balance of actions is maintained in our bodies; one set of vessels absorb and another deposit; one set accumulates and another removes. When this equilibrium is destroyed disease ensues, and, if it be not restored, death must succeed. This leads us at once to infer the true value of that knowledge, which enables us to understand the complex actions of our system, so that we may check their inordinateness or remedy their defects. In the organs of sense we find every thing that is wonderful in design, and admirable in execution. We behold Omnipotence in every product, and Omniscience in every plan. We see system within system, organ within organ, each differing from the other, performing different offices, all tending to the perfection of a common function; which itself is but a small part, contributed to the perfection of the general whole. With such views of the subject, we may be excused for ex...
