Introduction: Anything can happen and eventually will In our era of terrorism and endless conflicts and throughout human history we start out this book in Chapter 1 with a subject that has touched countless millions with death, destruction and the after effects of living in its postmodern world. War. I have grown up in a war mongering world and living with the effects of a Cold War posture it has had a profound effect on the way I view the world. Post WWII and the years that followed the war to end all wars has pasted in the back of everyones mind the potential of a nuclear attack by our enemies whether we acknowledge it or not. Back in 1980 fresh out of high school the Chinese were threatening with the invasion of the island nation of Taiwan our ally and Ronald Reagan as president made it clear that any attack on them would be viewed as an attack on the U. S. and met with the full force of our military. It was a tense time and I even saw myself possibly entering the military to do my part to combat the Chinese threat. Fortunately, cooler heads prevailed, the Chinese backed down and the threat went away. But Ill remember always that feeling of, is this it Would the two superpowers now come to blows and bomb the daylights out of each other One of the movies I recall in my youth was Red Dawn where Cuban rebels infiltrated our homeland disguised in commercial airliners, after tactical nuclear strikes took out our leadership, they controlled a vast portion of the heartland backed by Soviet forces. It all seemed so...
