Excerpt: . . . feet back from the electric car track, that he could not see a. car going west from the square or armory to the corner; that a person seated in such a wagon opposite the flagnans house could see two thirds of the distance from the armory to the corner, and that he could not obtain a view up the track towards the armory after he had passed the line of the trees until he reached a point fourteen feet south of the southerly rail of the defendants track. The plaintiffs evidence tended to show that the night in question was dark, with light snow or rain; that the defendants car came at the rate of twelve to sixteen miles an hour, and that the plaintiff was driving at the rate of between four and five miles an hour. He testified that after he looked...
