The trip of a lifetime to the Barron Lands region of the Canadian Arctic becomes a test of a family s strength and survival skills. Bob had been a guide at Tundra Camp for several summers. A jewel in the remote Canadian arctic, Tundra Camp was only accessible by float plane. His father-in-law presented him with an opportunity to take his family to this far-reaching untouched wilderness of the Northwest Territories. They expected to spend the summer exploring and enjoying the natural splendor and peaceful solitude of the majestic tundra. Then a massive arctic storm changes a two day boat trip away from the base camp into a harrowing undertaking. The author s family is forced into survival mode as conditions become life threatening. Fatigued and exhausted with no ready shelter for protection, they are out of options. With no other choices they await their fate.
